Dear [redacted] STATINTL

The praise for your presentation just keeps rolling in. Even those disposed to look upon the CIA with a jaundiced eye were lavish in their encomiums and marvelled at your ability to be candid, informative, and thoroughly charming. You reflected great credit on both the agency and your alma mater.

STATINTL

I was visited, at various times after your appearance, by students and faculty who urged me, in effect, to establish an annual [redacted] Day so that succeeding generations of students would have the benefit of your wisdom. It was, in short, a resounding success.

I want to make certain that you are fully reimbursed for any expenses that you might have incurred. Since this job falls to Laura Birkmeyer, I'm sure that the process has been set in motion and will be carried out with her usual efficiency. In the event that any problem does crop up, please don't hesitate to call or write.

Please convey to Barbara my thanks for her visit. The opportunity that I had to speak with her at dinner was a high point of the day for me. She is a thoroughly delightful dinner companion and a very lovely lady.

Your appearance has set the standard for this kind of event and I hope that we can repeat it sometime soon.

Sincerely,

Ross K. Baker
Professor of Political Science
